

Personal History

In this section we ask you to fill out a personal history to the best of your knowledge and return it. Your answers are key to figure out what age the person with Alzheimer's is living in their mind, the significant possessions to trigger fond memories and the individual attributes so we can remind them who they are. Knowing they are Catholic isn't enough. Knowing they have always carried around a rosary and recited a prayer every night before bed is priceless information. They may always have worn jewelry and now are crying or yelling, which we blame on Alzheimer's. In actuality they are unable to communicate that they are upset because the jewelry they have worn for a lifetime is gone. Go ahead.. .find out what the person enjoyed doing during the day in their own "home": folding clothes, piling wood, sewing, gardening, cooking etc. Now simplify, simplify, simplify. They can no longer make a dress but they can still sew on buttons, roll yarn, feel fabrics and talk about the memories the experience triggers. We cannot give them back their memory, but we can give them an experience that triggers their whole memory and that's exciting!

It's also important to incorporate "habits of a lifetime". For instance, the person may have always taken a bath in the evening. So, if we give him/her give a sponge bath in the morning just to fit our schedule, it will only create confusion. We are all wonderfully different, with very different "habits of a lifetime"!

I recommend you give the questionnaire to a variety of people who are close to the person with Alzheimer's. This not only makes the family member or friend feel like they are helping along the journey but it also gives you a wide range of personal history. So enjoy diving into their history! We guarantee this journey will be easier and you will find more joy because you are giving them back their history, their accomplishments, and their fond memories. In other words, together we get to put a smile on their face, a comfort in their eyes, and a joy in their hearts.
